

The Latino Vote in the 2016 Election

How impactful has the Latino vote been historically and what impact will it have in the 2016 local and presidential elections?

Latinos make up 55.3 million of the U.S. population. Out of those, 27.3 million will be eligible to vote in 2016. There is usually much talk about the impending "Latino vote" and the impact it will have on U.S. elections. The chatter becomes even more intensified every four years when we find ourselves in the heat of a presidential election. But what do we really know about Latino voting patterns in the U.S. and Latinos ability to truly sway or determine elections?

Antonio Gonzalez
President
Southwest Voter
Registration Education Project

Ben Monterroso
Executive Director
Mi Familia Vota

Join us on this interactive panel as experts grapple with these questions in an attempt to look beneath the surface and go beyond the rhetoric.

REGISTER NOW!

www.alianzaamericas.org

Thursday
September 22.